

DANIEL JOHNNES
PRESENTS

La Paulée de New York

Bloomberg

Burgundy Fans Savor $7000 Reds With Food by Boulud

By Elin McCoy

February 21, 2011

Daniel Johnnes, organizer and host of La Paulée de New York.
Photographer: Elin McCoy

“At midnight, the Cadets de Bourgogne belt out ‘New York, New York’ as 370 Burgundy fans sip the region’s greatest wines, twirling white napkins above their heads in time with the music. This is the official finale of La Paulée de New York, a bi-annual three-day extravaganza organized and hosted by Daniel Johnnes, wine director at Restaurant Daniel. The event never fails to remind us just how stunning Burgundy’s best pinots and chardonnays can be. If great Bordeaux is wine for investing, Burgundy is for seduction and singing and, above all, drinking. Especially at this BYOB party at New York’s Metropolitan Pavilion, where winemakers (there are 35 top producers here) and scores of aficionados bring big bottles and old vintages to share.”

The full article is available here.